History of FOX61 Student News

The FOX61 Student News is more than 30 years old, but it has had some changes over the years.

Originally called FOX61 Kids News, we auditioned students all over the state to record introductions to news stories. Eventually, the program evolved into having students produce their own stories. Those stories were aired during programming for young people in the morning and afternoons.

In the mid-1990s, along with corporate sponsors, we started awarding scholarships to students and money for video equipment to the schools who produced the best story during the school year. The award ceremony drew students, teachers and family members from around the state for an exciting afternoon.

Along with the award program, FOX61 staff would visit schools to talk about careers in journalism, and to provide feedback to the student's stories.

Many students have taken part in the program over the years. Some have used the experience to help them with public speaking and presentation skills, while others have gone on to successful careers in broadcast journalism. Will Ripley and Jessica Schneider both appeared in stories from Manchester High School and are now reporting for CNN. Will as an International Correspondent based at the network's Hong Kong bureau and Jessica as a justice correspondent based in Washington, D.C. Dion Lim, from Haddam-Killingworth High School, now works as an anchor at ABC 7 KGO in San Francisco. Marcus Harun, from Hamden High School, now works as a producer for NBC News in New York.

We are proud to show the students' stories and help their education with this unique program.

Ryan Breton Meteorologist

Ryan Breton is a meteorologist for FOX61 News. You can catch his forecasts weekend evenings at 10 p.m. and 11 p.m., and reports on science, climate and the environment during the week.

Before joining FOX61, Ryan worked at NEWS CENTER Maine (WCSH-TV) in Portland for four and a half years. While in Maine, Ryan covered countless nor'easters and the state's largest tornado outbreak on record.

Ryan earned his Bachelor of Science degree in meteorology from Penn State, one of the best atmospheric science programs in the country.

He began his on-air career at NH1 News in Concord, New Hampshire, and worked as an intern with the meteorologists at WCVB-TV in Boston while in college.

Ryan has been nominated for a Boston/New England EMMY award for Outstanding Meteorologist. He obtained the American Meteorological Society's Certified Broadcast Meteorologist (CBM) seal in the fall of 2018.

Outside of work, you can find Ryan spending time outdoors skiing, golfing or running. His favorite sport is football and he proudly roots for the New England Patriots and Penn State Nittany Lions. Ryan grew up in southern New Hampshire and is glad to be forecasting in New England.

FOX61 Student News Reminders

Remember you can always watch FOX61 Student News stories on Fridays during the 7 am, 5 pm, and 10 pm hours and on Saturday morning. FOX61 Student News can always be watched on FOX61.com/studentnews and our FOX61 app.

How can you and your school be a part of FOX61 Student News?

It's as simple as emailing us at studentnews@fox61.com and telling us your name, town, and school name. We can set up an account along with instructions to navigate your way to becoming a FOX61 Student News member.

Teacher Workshop

Teachers can join our workshop this fall (date to be determined) and receive professional guidance from the FOX61 News staff. During our workshop, teachers can learn industry standards such as planning your story, shooting, editing, writing, fact-checking and reporting, as well as how to send us your finished stories so they can air on our live broadcast. To sign up for our workshop, please email us at studentnews@fox61.com. Please remember to add your name, title, school, and how many people you wish to attend the workshop. During the school year, we will provide teachers with online tools, resources, and webinars.
